Summary: To rhyme with his wife's name, Iemitsu playfully named their daughter Mana, a name that meant 'loving seven'. Ohhh he had no idea just what he got his daughter into when he gave her that name...truthfully, he was inspired with the seven guardians schtick but still...he did not expect the family genes to blossom her in a good way, considering he hasn't seen her in eight years!

Uncanny Resemblance

Bloodied Bosses

Iemitsu had no idea what he bargained for when he gave his daughter the name Mana when Nana popped a girl into the world, not the boy he expected, as all sons in the family are named after Shoguns. So he named her with a name that rhymes with his wife's while meaning differently and meaningfully. He hoped that unlike him, he who has no time to have Guardians despite being a Sky(none of his subordinates harmonized with him at all and he had no time to look outside), his daughter would have over seven knights to look after her.

His baby girl grew up to be a cute toddler before he had to leave for work, unfortunately.

But nine years later...he had no idea what became of his daughter despite phone calls to his wife whenever possible...until he managed to secure a line just so his wife could fax a photo over safely. This was because...well...Vongola is in danger as all official heirs are killed, and there's a shadow heir...who unfortunately, is his daughter.

Upon getting the fax...

His baby girl grew up to be a lovely mix of western and eastern genes that to his subordinates' horror, a fountain of blood gushed out of their boss' nose.

When they looked, they all thought in disbelief,

"How the hell did he spawn a flower like this?!" they all thought as
THEY SEE NO RESEMBLANCE AT ALL, DAMMIT!

After printing a new copy as the first one was beyond saving(as in too soggy with a chemical to clean the blood off), Iemitsu gave a fresh, crisp photo to Timoteo...with tissues stuffed up his nose when he came in.

'This is my daughter, Nono.' he said with a stuffy voice. Timoteo raised an eyebrow until he looked at the photo of Mana with Nana...needless to say a new copy has to be printed for the assigned tutor.

Timoteo was inwardly lamenting that he had to make her the tenth boss.

He wished she was born a man instead. A face like hers often draws trouble...now he got worried and guiltier, hoping that Reborn would work a miracle somehow.

Reborn raised an eyebrow as he saw Timoteo with bloodied tissues up his nostrils.

'Nono, what happened?'

'Well...your new student is a little...nosebleed-inducing for being too cute.' Timoteo coughed, giving the Arcobaleno the photo. 'But I fear for her as well so I hope you can make her stronger than my mother in her heyday.' Reborn flipped the photo given to him because it was faced down.

He saw a beautiful, blonde-haired girl with cognac-brown eyes. Features she got from her father while despite having little asian beauty by the shape of her eyes and face, her looks are clearly western in origin.

'He spawned something like this? Unbelievable.' he scoffed. 'Miracles do happen.' that explained why his employer has a nosebleed. But Reborn is immune to something like this because he is the world's greatest. 'Information?'

'Well...he's in no condition to get it due to severe anemia so you would have to fly to Japan and get it yourself, unfortunately. He's in hospital.' said Timoteo sheepishly, causing Reborn to sigh in exasperation.

'Alright. That moron owes me for this.'
